Orland P. T. A. Play A Winner

"A Southern Cinderella" a comedy drama in three acts was the offering placed before an expectant public on Thursday April 3rd by the Orland P. T. A. for its annual "home talent" dramatic attempt and as in the year before, it went over "big", both from a histrionic and a financial standpoint. Adele Cooper, who is retiring as president of the Orland P. T. A., had personal charge of the selection, direction and staging of the play and deserves much credit for her arduous work. The cast (not a man in it) showed a good understanding of their respective parts and entered into the enactment of them with an enthusiasm that could only bring success.

The various roles and their respective interpreters are as follows: Caroline Hawke, Nurses sister, an adventuress, Edna Doctor Katherine Hawke, Madam Chart-eris English nurse, Mae Minnick Mammy Judy Johnson, A Black Blue Grass Widow, Florence Kay Miss Johnnie Bell Randolph, A Little Coquette, Bernice Rahn Rose Winterberry, A famous settlement worker, Nina Kay Madam Carteris, An old Southern Aristocrat, Loreta Ludwig Enid Bellanny, Southern Cinderella, Laurine Hewson The performance of every member of the cast can be put down as excellent.

Mrs. Ray Doctor and Mrs. Mae Minnick as the scheming sisters certainly were excellent; Mrs. Bernice Rahn looked and acted the part of the daughter of the old Southern Artistocracy; Mrs. Nina Kay, as the settlement worker, charmed and captivated the audience by her perfect interpretation of the role; and Laurine Hewson, as the "Southern Cinderella", was good to look upon and pleasing to the senses in the role of the abused and finally triumphant heiress. Mrs. Matt Ludwig in the role of the aged Southern Aristocrat, achieved a remarkable success. The following little incident will illustrate how faithfully and excellently she enacted her part. The role calls for a makeup and interpretation of an elderly lady of the old Southern type. How well Mrs. Ludwig was made up and carried out the role may be judged from the fact that one of the audience who did not know Mrs. Ludwig personally, on seeing her on the stage, made the remark "Look at that old lady. It's a shame to have her on the stage. She looks so frail and old I'm afraid she might collapse."

That's realism in acting or the writer is no judge.

Mrs. Lester Kay, also garnered unto herself a lion's share of applause and commendation for her excellent portrayal of the comedy role of Mammy Judy, the black, blue grass widow and most of the kiddies around Orland are still talking about how "good she was."

While not the financial success that last year's performance was, the net profit on the undertaking was very satisfactory and will be applied to the P. T. A's fund for improvement of the school grounds, probably to the building of the new side walk.

Clarence Beagley donated the use of a radio to help out in the program. The stage settings were made and arranged under the direction of Prof. Holt. Mrs. Ray Holton supplied the furniture and various ladies of the village helped out in supplying the wardrobe. It might be mentioned that the evening gown Mrs. Minnick wore in the last act was the gown worn by Mrs. Henry Waje on the occasion of her wedding. Mrs. Henry Rahn and Mrs. Sherman S. Knox superintended the costuming and makeup for the different parts.

The consensus of opinion is that instead of annual affair the P. T. A. ought to put on a show twice a year.

TINLEY PARK GARDEN CLUB

APRIL ARTISAN

Of sunbeams April spins a skein
Of silken sheen
For warp. For woof, the rain.
From these a tapestry she weaves
Of morning mists. Drear hills and plain

She decks in green
Sod carpets. Faries fain
Would spread beneath the trees
Gossamer, gypsy tents,
Languorous moments
Bring scented breezes forth to play
Where perfumes rival those of Araby.

At eve, the Heavens' content
Resolved again to primal elements,
Transmuted, now become,
With magic like the alchemists' of old--
Treasures vast, of glowing western gold.

Surmounts Physical Handicap

Seattle, Wash.—A practical idealist, whose credo is "service," and who gives a philosophy of cheerfulness to those who are down, such a man is Dr. Frank R. Loope of Seattle.

For eighteen years he has been bedridden.

A reporter walked into the "office," a big sun porch, as one of two telephones at his bed rang and the doctor proceeded to aid a World War veteran in getting out of jail.

Doctor Loope lay flat on his back, the two telephones within easy reach, letter files at the side of his bed, a checkbook on the covers, magazines, papers, cigarettes and a radio at hand.

And there he directs almost innumerable enterprises—aiding individuals to overcome physical handicaps.

The physician picked up a specially framed mirror and focussed it on his guests. He is unable to turn his head, but he can move his eyes and arms. Thus he is able to follow the movements and expressions of any one in his room.

Under the general title of "sunshine industries," Doctor Loope is the directing genius behind a wheel chair store, a repair store, is building up a fund for an industrial home for shut-ins and arranges hundreds of programs for invalids.

The industrial home—where those aiding themselves would be able to live close to their work—is his big dream.

In addition to that work, Doctor Loope finds positions for those who have been handicapped. He distributes radios, gives advice, acts as father confessor to hundreds of persons, advises as a physician and arranges for medical attention.

His telephone rang constantly during the interview.

The soldier was paroled to his custody, then a hysterical woman telephoned. Calm tones replied to shrill voice, and then, ironically, an organization that had obtained his telephone number called to ask him to buy two tickets to a dance.

The doctor is not a wealthy man, in fact he frequently encounters difficulty in obtaining funds for his many enterprises, in addition to those needed for himself.

For years after he was stricken, the doctor related, "I felt I was terribly abused." Then he adopted the philosophy of "Sunshine and Smiles," the title of a column he conducts for shut-ins in the Seattle Star.

"I don't preach, I serve," he said. "Help the shut-in to help himself—to keep himself away from his troubles."

PUBLIC LOVE MAKING

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

They are apparently more conservative and more conventional in China than we are here in America. The city government of Hankow has recently enacted a law prohibiting out-door kissing even between husbands and wives, the reason for this seemingly radical enforcement of the law being perhaps that when one sees these public demonstrations of uncontrolled emotion it is impossible to tell without embarrassing inquiry just what the exact blood relationship, if any, there is between the osculating parties.

The first victims, according to reports, have been Mr. and Mrs. Chen Chang-hang, a newly married pair. They were driving in an open carriage when a policeman saw Mr. Chen kiss his bride. Both were arrested. Mr. Chen was fined $25, and he and his wife were forced to furnish bondsmen, who guaranteed that the newlyweds will not again offend the proprieties.

I believe that such a law might prove salutary in our own country. Husbands and wives do not seem to be our most serious offenders, but one need not go far to find others who use public places to do their love making. Once upon a time it was not considered good taste for young people, ture association campaign just ended. Rechecking of the more than a million votes shows the wild rose rolled up a total of 402,811 votes out of the 1,067,672 votes cast. It gained a plurality of more than 150,000 votes over the columbine, the nearest contender.

The wild rose won in every state except Colorado, Florida, Minnesota and Washington.

Pennsylvania, with 111,256 votes; Ohio, with 78,048; New York, with 63,835, and Wisconsin, with 59,779, led the country in number of ballots cast. Washington supported the columbine more vigorously than any other state.

Only seven votes separate the rose and its rival in South Dakota. More than 6,000 people, Americans living outside the 48 states, are represented in the "No State" column.

The columbine had 261,451 backers, who threatened, during early December, to sweep under the rose in a flood of votes. When the contest closed, however, the leader was still gaining.

More than 65 per cent of the vote was divided between the two leaders and there is no question of these being the national favorites. The violet, goldenrod, American beauty rose, phlox, daisy, dogwood and mountain laurel, which finished in the order listed, never had a chance of victory. All other flowers received but three and one-half per cent of the total.

The wild rose, despite criticisms to this effect, is not the flower of England; that emblem is the cultivated rose. The campaign did not designate one particular variety of wild rose, but left it possible for each community to feel that its local representative of the genus was the choice of the country.

The ocean is the only power on earth that can make a woman indifferent to her personal appearance.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By GRANT DIXON

Meaningless

One of the more meaningless details of New York life is the business of supplying references when one wants to move into a new apartment. A friend of mine, a dramatic critic, is lodged in a towering, exclusive building. He informs me he had to pass close scrutiny before he was allowed to sign a lease.

Yet his neighbor on the top floor is the proprietor of a speak-easy across the street. He is a relative of one of New York's most notorious gangsters. He is politically powerful, though, and once a year gives a huge ball in his own honor at one of the better hotels.

His apartment is a fortress. The door is of armor steel. He didn't like ordinary windows, so he had a church supply house make him stained glass windows.

The Vanishing German

There are, even at this late date, five German bands in New York, and if you look hard enough you may find one playing on a street corner. But the business isn't what it used to be. Variety reports that the average income for each man in these bands was a dollar a day last year. They used to get "throw money" by playing in front of speak-easies, but the police chased them away.

Al Fresco Dinner

Alexander Mazzone, a gatekeeper on the Long Island railroad, has a lunch hour from noon to 12:45 p. m. No trains pass his gate during that time, but Alexander feels that he should not leave his post even then.

So, promptly at noon, he gets out a folding table, sets it between the rails, spreads a cloth and serves himself a lunch. It is only fair, thinks Alexander, that he and not some foolish motorist should get bumped in case an unscheduled train should arrive during the noonday.

A Hot Fire

Sam White smelled a fire the other day and turned in an alarm. He was in a building at the foot of Manhattan, and in that district a single alarm brings out more apparatus than two or three would farther uptown. When a dozen or so pieces of fire-fighting machinery had arrived Sam discovered that the fire had been in the rear of his trousers. He had put his pipe in his hip pocket. Naturally, the newspapers made much of the story.

The next day a veteran newspaper man told me that none had written so clever a headline as a friend of his had written twenty years ago concerning a similar occurrence. The headline was: "Sixty Firemen Rush to Blaze in One Pair of Pants."

The Modern Murder Trial

The state tax commission, headed by William H. Malone, in the first chapter of its annual report advocates 30 changes in the tax budget and revenue system of the state, looking toward simplification and equalization of taxes. Leading the list of recommendations is one that the tax revenue article of the state constitution "be entirely rephrased and that the uniform rule of the general property tax system be eliminated from the constitution."

The nonpartisan highway advisory board at its initial meeting passed a resolution endorsing the financial policy of the state's highway division for 1930 and approved the program to widen roads in the metropolitan areas of the state. Motions urging the highway division to arrange for a system of communication between the public and the highway patrolmen, so that the officers may be speedily notified in emergencies, and suggesting that the division enlarge its school of instruction for patrolmen also were adopted. After electing Senator R. R. Meents as chairman, and Representative Reed F. Cutler of Lewistown, secretary, the board met briefly with Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, who said it was his wish to have all present gaps in the bond issue roads closed during this construction year if possible.

Corn production totaling $224,280,000, represented over one-half of the total gross farm value of all field crops produced in Illinois during 1929, according to the complete crop records by counties announced in the joint report of state and federal departments of agriculture. Tame hay, with a total value of $82,700,000 finished second, oats were third with $56,635,000, and all wheat was fourth at $40,493,000.

This year Illinois will retire $8,058,055.87 in principal and interest of the outstanding road bonds in the $60,000,000 issue, according to a report made to Gov. Louis L. Emmerson by Director H. H. Cleaveland of the department of public works and buildings, and Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets.

A formal decree directing the Lincoln Monument association to convey the Lincoln tomb property to the state of Illinois has been filed in Circuit court by Master in Chancery Frank L. Trutter and approved by Circuit Judge Frank W. Burton. Since the association no longer exists and all its members are dead, the order will go in default and in that event the master is directed to make the conveyance in a deed drawn by himself. Although the state has held undisputed possession of the property since 1895, it was discovered recently that no deed of conveyance ever was filed. The suit to clear the title resulted. About $183,000 is to be spent soon by the state in repairs and improvements.

Garden crops will be increased this year at farms operated in connection with charitable and penal institutions of the state, in order to provide the wards with wholesome occupation, according to A. C. Everingham, the farm, garden and dairy consultant.

"Self-sustenance should be the end toward which we should strive, insofar as it can be attained without abusing the purposes which have already been outlined," Mr. Everingham said. "Not only are we constantly striving to increase the quantity and to improve the quality of the vegetables now commonly grown, but the adaptability of new varieties is being tried with the view of increasing the quantity of human food and adding variety to the diet."

Director Barney Cohen of the state department of labor cites the improved conditions in the building industry, indicated by the increase of 24.6 per cent in valuation of building permits issued for February over January as further proof that business and employment are on the upgrade, and calls particular attention to the state's building program. "For the construction of new buildings at its various institutions, the state will spend approximately $10,000,000 this year. It will spend between $26,000,000 and $30,000,000 for new roads alone. In addition a considerable sum will be spent by the 102 counties who get one-third of the available gas tax money. There seems to be good evidence that the favorable signs appearing in February point to increased volume of employment in Illinois during the next few months, and also to increased earnings for Illinois wage earners," concludes Mr. Cohen.

The University of Illinois Y. M. C. A. within the next month will intensify its campaign to raise $1,000,000 under the direction of B. S. Pearsall of Elgin. It is planned to erect a building without any commercial features on the two lots on Wright street, Champaign, where now two temporary frame structures house the activities of the association, one of the oldest organizations on the university campus. The building with site and furnishings will cost $340,000 and $300,000 will be set aside as a maintenance fund yielding $18,000 yearly.

Before fall, unless unforeseen obstacles develop, the new state hospital at Manteno will be accommodating 1,000 persons suffering from mental disorders, A. L. Bowen, superintendent of charities, has announced. Completion of the first units of the new institution will mark the achievement of a large part of the task set for the administration by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson when he announced that the hundreds of mental patients, now sleeping on floors, would be provided with beds by the end of the year if humanly possible. Around this first group of buildings at Manteno, Director Rodney H. Brandon of the department of public welfare, is planning to build other units with the ultimate aim of providing quarters for at least 6,000 patients.

The relic house at Cahokia Mounds park, on Route 11 about four miles east of East St. Louis, recently constructed and opened to the public, is attracting daily hundreds of visitors, including archaeologists and students. Of the 3,000 lineal feet of case space, over half has been filled by enthusiastic collectors interested in the welfare of the park. Several requests were made to the State of Illinois from individual collectors of Indian relics asking the privilege of stocking the cases completely. H. H. Cleaveland, director of the department of public works and buildings, felt more interest would attach to the exhibits if many collectors were allowed to place a small part of their wonderful collections in the cabinets.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson will award a silver cup to the winner in the state oratorical contest open to students in high school agriculture classes. The winner in the state contest in addition to receiving the Governor Emmerson trophy will represent Illinois in the national tournament to be conducted at the Kansas City Royal Livestock show next fall. State finals will be held in Urbana in June.

In a report to Gov. Louis L. Emmerson on March 28, the state pardon board announced that 65 prisoners in Chester, Pontiac and Joliet had been denied pardons or commutations of sentence. The majority of applications were made by persons under long-term sentences for murder, with armed robbery second.

Mrs. H. W. Whitten of Carthage, president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, has been made a member of two important commissions concerned with the educational advancement of Illinois. The first is the Illinois committee to study the problem of illiteracy and arrange a program of classes for illiterates, appointed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson to co-operate with the national committee, at the suggestion of Ray Lyman Wilbur, secretary of the interior. The second is the commission to have charge of the physically handicapped children's survey in Hancock county. These county commissions are working under the direction of the commission created by the last general assembly to make a state-wide survey of physically handicapped children, their hospitalization, education and all matters pertaining to their welfare. The commission will report their findings to the fifty-seventh general assembly.

Approximately $2,000,000 will be refunded to counties this year to repay them for the cost of constructing state aid roads which have been incorporated in the state bond issue system, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has been informed by the division of highways.

And in 1931 additional refunds totaling approximately $500,000 will be made, according to Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets. Each year the department attempts to pay all refunds which may be outstanding, but when funds are not available to meet the entire amount that is due, the sum set aside for refunds is proportioned to the various counties in proportion to the total amount due them. On the basis of the March 1 inventory, the department this year will be able to pay the counties approximately 94 per cent of the amount due them.

Through Director Rodney H. Brandon of the state department of welfare, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has closed a loophole through which persons accused of crime might avoid conviction and punishment by pleading insanity. Henceforth, alleged criminals who are confined in the Chester prison for the criminal insane and later recover their sanity, will not be released unless a guaranty is given that prosecuting officials will try them for the crimes that are charged against them.

Illinois corn acreage will be about the same as last season if later planting conditions permit farmers to carry out their early intention, according to a joint survey made by the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture.

A scientific study of state-owned tracts of land in southern Illinois will be made during Easter vacation by a group of University of Illinois students under the direction of Dr. V. E. Sheldford and Dr. A. R. Cahn. Headquarters will be made at Alto Pass in Union county.

Senator Otis Glenn's amendment to raise the tariff rate on broom corn from $10 per ton to $20 per ton was passed by the senate by a vote of 37 to 22. Under the tariff act of 1922 broom corn came in free of duty.

Lesson for April 13

THE CHILD AND THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:1-14; 19:13-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Suffer little children, and forbid them not to come unto Me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus, the Children's Friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Friend of Girls and Boys.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Growing in the Kingdom.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Sin of Neglecting and Misguiding Children.

I. The Greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven (vv. 1-4).

1. The disciples' question (v. 1).

The prominence given to Peter in connection with the announcement of Christ's purpose to build the church and the payment of tribute with the money in the fish's mouth, provoked jealousy on the part of the other disciples. The transfiguration scene revealed the divine person and the program of His kingdom. Seeing that the kingdom was to come to realization despite the tragedy of the cross, the disciples wished to know their place of rank in the kingdom.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 2-4).

He taught them by placing a little child in their midst.

(1) Condition of entrance into the kingdom (v. 3). The great question was as to whether they were really in the kingdom. Their behavior revealed the fact that they needed conversion. Before they could even see, much less enter into, the kingdom, they must be born from above (John 3:3, 5).

(2) Whosoever possesses childlike humility is the greatest (v. 4). The child is dependent, lowly and modest. Those who have been born again, or converted, have these characteristics.

II. The Lord's Identification With His Believing Ones (vv. 5-9).

1. Receiving the believer in Christ's name is receiving Christ (v. 5).

Through faith in Christ we become God's children and so completely His life interwoven with His that He regards treatment of us as treatment of Himself.

2. The peril of causing a believer to stumble (vv. 6-9).

To cause to stumble means to give occasion for a moral fall. The particular reference was to the carnality and selfishness which were expressing themselves in their contention for preeminence. Their behavior was not only an injury, but a stumbling block to others. Everything causing one to stumble, though it be as vital as hands and feet, should be removed.

III. Believers Are Specially Cared for by the Heavenly Father (vv. 10-14).

1. They are under angelic guardianship (v. 10).

So precious is the believer in God's sight that angelic messengers are provided (Heb. 1:10). These angelic messengers have access to the very throne of God, even beholding His face. So high is the honor bestowed upon believers that the highest angels are sent to guard them.

2. The Son came especially to save such from their lost condition (vv. 11-14).

The Heavenly Father does not will that any one of these should perish. They are objects of the Father's seeking love. The salvation of the humble believer has been secured by the incarnation and the sacrifice of the Good Shepherd.

IV. Jesus Receiving Little Children (Matt. 19:13-15).

We should carefully note the setting of this text. Jesus had been speaking of the sanctity of marriage, which is the bulwark of the home. Into the sacred enclosure of the home comes childhood to complete and ennoble it.

1. Children brought to Jesus (v. 13).

Doubtless they were brought by their parents. Many parents today who are careless as to themselves, desire to bring their children into touch with Jesus Christ.

2. Rebuked by the disciples (v. 13).

They regarded children as too insignificant to engage the Lord's attention. Christ places high value upon children.

3. The disciples rebuked by Christ (v. 14).

These words uttered by the Lord have placed a peculiar dignity upon the child. It is Christlike to care for children and no service in the world pays such large dividends.

4. Christ laid His hands upon the children (v. 15).

Sad and Lonely

Governor Gunderson of South Dakota said in Pierre in an address in praise of marriage:

"Is there anything as sad and lonely as the life of an old maid?"

"An old maid was looking over the goldfish in a pet shop. She was about to start an aquarium, you see."

"These little fellows here, ma'am," the salesman said, "are 40 cents apiece. Them big ones are $1.50 up."

"The old maid bent over and studied the goldfish through her spectacles."

"Could you tell me," she said wistfully, "which size would be the best company for me?"

FAMILY DOCTOR

LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripped; children liked its pleasant taste. All drugstores today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

Veterans on Pension Rolls

On December 31, 1929, there were 472,917 old soldiers on the pension rolls of the bureau of pensions. Of this number 183,310 were Spanish American veterans, 55,716 were Civil war veterans; and the remainder were regular service men, and veterans of the Indian wars.

TOMATO GROWER

When he is not plumbing he is sprinkling cinder dust on his tomato plants. As a result he is raising tomato plants where every tomato averages 2 1/2 lbs. each. Their size can be judged by the photograph of Mr. Walter King holding one of his apples of the earth in his hand. If you cultivate tomatoes and want to emulate Mr. King's example, get lots of cinder dust and sprinkle your plants very generously. (Herbert Photos.)

STORY FROM THE START

Returning to America, during the War of 1812, after a successful voyage, Capt. Lion Fellowes' merchant ship Sachem was sunk on Portugal by a British frigate. His crew surrenders, but Fellowes reaches shore exhausted. His life is saved by an English speaking girl who conceals her identity. He learns from her, however, that she is about to set out for Lisbon. Fellowes goes to Lisbon, hoping to find a vessel America bound. He meets Capt. Chater, of the American ship True Bounty, an acquaintance. Chater offers him a berth as mate. Fellowes refuses, knowing Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy. He meets the girl who saved his life, Cara Inglepin, daughter of the owner of the True Bounty. Cara induces him to sail as mate.

CHAPTER III—Continued

Everyone but the duenna hastened on deck to watch the Badger come foaming down from windward.

"Oh, brave," cried Cara Inglepin clapping her hands delightedly.

She received Fellowes' eager greeting with a hint of embarrassment—almost as if she regretted last night's kiss, he thought—and continued quickly:

"We are fortunate 'tis the Badger. Sometimes the blockading captains are very severe. But Captain Collishawe is a gentleman, and my father's friend."

"'Crimplin' Collishawe! Yes, many Americans have called him friend!"

"Why, Lion!" There was asperity in her tone. "'Tis vulgar. I vow! You must not speak so. You'll ill commend yourself to Captain Collishawe."

"I have no concern with Captain Collishawe," he returned, and walked away, heedless of her protest.

The Badger rounded to under the True Bounty's quarter. Collishawe hung in the starboard mizzen-rigging, a tall, lean man, of about Fellowes' age, handsomely uniformed, his half-boots polished, his blue coat fitting trimly. His manner was haughty as he hailed:

"Ahoy! What ship's that?"

"True Bounty, Cap'n Chater, from Lisbon for New York, with wine and lemons," answered Chater.

"I'll send a boat aboard you," snapped Collishawe. "Have your papers ready."

He turned to give some order, and Miss Inglepin ran to the True Bounty's side, waving her mantilla.

"Oh, James," she cried. "Haven't you a word for me? 'Tis unmanly, sir."

He swung around. The sternness melted from his features.

"Cara! What rare good fortune! I'll come aboard, myself."

The Badger's boat swung overside and rowed smartly across the gap of choppy water separating the vessels. Collishawe leaped from its gunwale to the rope-ladder Chater had ordered rigged for him, ascending its rungs as lightly as a monkey and vaulted to the merchantman's deck with hands outstretched to Cara. Their voices friendly, excited, clamoring together, exasperated Fellowes unreasonably.

He tried not to listen to them, but he couldn't very well help himself.

"—dispatches on the eve of our sailing," she was saying. "'Twas reported the Grand army evacuated Moscow in October, and was torn to pieces in the retreat. Napoleon, himself, barely escaped."

"Great news," applauded Collishawe. "And the Peninsula?"

"Lord Wellington carries all before him. Soul is on the defensive. Your people are certain they will drive him over the Pyrenees before autumn."

"Excellent! An uphill struggle, 'gad, but the French are nigh finished. With the Russians on their backs—"

"But have you news for us?" she interrupted eagerly. "Have you heard of my father?"

He laughed on a keen, boyish note that Fellowes found ingratiating.

"We hear from our friends. Your father does well, but is roundly abused. Your uncle diverts himself fitting out privateers against us." His face clouded. "The Yankees have tricked us once more with those razees of theirs. Our Java struck to the Constitution in a fight off the Brazils. 'Tis said the Constitution refused to close, and hammered the Java with her long guns. I hold we are but discovering captains grown soft from fighting the French."

Chater frowned assent; but Cara Inglepin replied spiritedly:

"No, James, you are wrong, and you do your own country no honor thereby, since we Americans are but Englishmen transplanted to another land and toying with another government."

He laughed once more at that.

"Toying with another government. You have a trick of language, Cara. 'Tis so. They are for re-electing this idiot President of theirs, while those of your father's opinion labor to supply our wants—and remedy the sores that run at home. But their eyes will be opened anon. Admiral Cockburn has proclaimed a blockade of their whole coast, and with Napoleon tottering we shall soon have sufficient troops in Canada to brush aside their militia levies, sweep down the Hudson and take New York."

"Aye, aye, Cap'n Collishawe, that's how it shall be," Chater cried servilely. "And if ye'll suffer me to attend ye to the cabin, we'll tell ye summat of interest along that line."

Cara seconded the invitation.

"Yes, yes, James, do let me give you a dish of tea. We've so much to discuss. I had vast success in Lisbon. There were friends bade me fetch messages to you, and my father will wish to know how the Admiral esteems our purposes. So come below, James, and meanwhile Captain Chater shall give orders to break out a barrel of port for you—yes, Captain Chater, and a fierce of lemons to ward against the scurvy."

Collishawe bowed his appreciation.

"Always thoughtful, Cara! Ah, I'll be grateful when this cursed war is ended, and I may call on you again in Broadway, and smoke my pipe in the garden under the tulip trees."

Her answering smile, as he ushered her into the cabin, was a dagger of jealousy in Fellowes' heart. Raging silently, the Long Islander didn't hear Chater's hail until it had been repeated.

"Fellowes! Ahoy, Mr. Fellowes! Ye heard Miss Cara's orders? Well, see to 'em. The port ye can take from the cabin stores—I'll send the key."

For the next quarter hour Fellowes was busy, slinging the keg of port overside, and breaking out the lemons from beneath the forward hatch. When the task had been concluded he walked aft, entering the cabin companionway without knocking, as was his custom.

At the end of the passage was the main cabin, a spacious apartment, with a long table thwartwise of the ship, about which sat Miss Inglepin, Collishawe and Chater, their heads bent over a small heap of papers. Fellowes could distinguish several documents which bore official seals.

"The Admiral should be off the Delaware capes," Collishawe was saying. "But we'll pass on the word to him."

"We must have time to consult our New England friends," interposed Miss Inglepin.

"Aye, 'tis no matter to be hasted," agreed Chater. And raising his head, perceived Fellowes in the companionway.

"Well, now, what will it be, Mr. Fellowes?"

"The cabin stores key."

"Oh!" Chater cracked his finger-knuckles abstractedly, peering from his mate to the Badger's captain.

"Well, jest hang it on the hook there. That'll be all, Mr. Fellowes."

Miss Inglepin looked away as Fellowes strode across the narrow floor, but Collishawe eyed him alertly.

"I've seen you in New York, haven't I?" Collishawe asked Fellowes, who replied, with a shrug:

"Very likely, Captain. I remember having seen you."

"Ah! Be so good as to shut the companionway door after you."

Fellowes tramped out. What were they up to in the cabin? He recalled Cara's conversation with Wellington. Was the True Bounty a medium for conveying intelligence of treasonable plots to the enemy?

Against the evidence accusatory he balanced his conviction of Cara's essential honesty, and not least, her fervid plea the night before. And he mustn't let jealousy of another man dye his opinions, he realized.

Perhaps half an hour passed, when the cabin door banged open, and Collishawe stepped out, Chater at his heels.

"Very good, Captain," the Englishman said in response to a remark Fellowes missed. "Please tell Miss Cara I'm sorry she was obliged to leave us. And I shall have to ask you to muster your crew. Very strict orders, y' know. 'Admiral instructs me to seize every British subject in enemy vessels."

"Well, now, sir, jest ye cast your eye over the men," whinnied Chater.

"Good, honest Federalists, every man jack of 'em, New Englanders, except a couple of lads out of Long Island."

"What about your officers?" Collishawe spun on his heel, and looked straight at Fellowes. "You, sirrah! I told you in the cabin I had seen you before. Your name is Fellowes, ain't it?"

"Yes, Captain," Fellowes answered quietly.

"Born in London, weren't you?"

"My father was—"

"Born in London?"

"My parents were in London because—"

"Went to Eton, eh?"

"Yes, but I don't see—"

Collishawe strode over to the gangway.

"A couple of you men up here," he called down to his boat's crew. And then, over his shoulder to Chater: "I'll have to press this man, British-born, and not of the type we can encourage in disloyalty."

"But I am an American citizen," Fellowes protested. "My father was consul—"

Collishawe ignored him.

"Bundle this feller overside," he directed the two bluejackets who had swarmed the gangway.

The bluejackets had seized Fellowes by either arm, and he tried to wrench out of their grip.

"Captain," he appealed to Chater, "you'll never submit to this! It's barefaced kidnapping."

Chater cracked his knuckles loudly, his sly twinkle helping the mournful droop assumed by his nut-cracker features.

"Don't, for marcy's sake, go and fight, Fellowes," he begged. "'Tisn't do ye no good." He addressed Collishawe direct: "I calculate ye kind of misunderstand, Captain. I've knowed Fellowes for years. His father was in London—"

"Immaterial to me what fetched his father to London," snapped Collishawe. "He's British-born. Get on with him, men."

Fellowes began to struggle, but the two husky bluejackets pinioned his hands behind his back. One of them snatched a loose coil of rope from the deck, and slipped a loop around his waist.

"Over with ye, me 'earty," he said cheerfully, and gave Fellowes a shove.

The Long Islander tumbled out the gangway, and skillfully checked by his captors above, was lowered like a meal sack into the waiting quarter-boat, heaving on the swell under the True Bounty's lee.

A little stunned by his bumping descent Fellowes lay where he had fallen while Collishawe dropped nimbly into the sternsheets. The True Bounty had way on her, and was already sliding through the water; but Fellowes had a brief glimpse of the duenna's face, very white and worn.

That is, he thought it was the duenna he saw, for the first time since putting out over Tagus bar, but he decided he must have lost his senses. For the face at the port said distinctly, with a thick tongue:

"Arrah, holy saints, they've stole the poor lad clane away!"

Fellowes was dumfounded, dazed by the suddenness of the injustice which had overtaken him. A whip was lowered from the yardarm of the Badger, and he was slung through the air, as casually as so much merchandise. Collishawe, who followed him by way of the Jacob's ladder, was equally casual in manner.

"Slack off this man's bonds, Mr. Curry—" to an officer, who held a spy-glass under his arm—"have that quarter-boat hauled aboard, and make sail for our station. Bosun! Clinch! Where's Clinch?"

"Aye, aye, sir!" A stalwart, battered sailor, with a jagged scar across one cheek, rolled up, tugging at his forelock.

"Have this man mustered in—able seaman—draw clothing for him."

But Fellowes turned desperately to Collishawe.

"Look here, Captain," he exclaimed, "you've made a mistake. I'm not a British subject—"

"Born in London, weren't you?"

"Yes, but my father and mother both were American citizens. My father was our consul."

"Humph! Don't think that lets you off. However—Humph! Got your press protection?"

"Press protection?" Fellowes repeated thickly. "No! Why should I carry one? I'm an American citizen, I tell you—and no common sailor, into the bargain. I hold master's papers."

Collishawe eyed him coldly.

Mangian Love Letters Inscribed on Bamboo

Perhaps the queerest type of love letter know in the world is that in vogue among the Mangians of the hill lands and mountains of Mindoro, P. I., who still hold to the ancient alphabet of about three vowels and ten consonants which they group into words inscribed on bamboo in a single vertical column, their bolos serving them as a stylus. They are an extremely simple and timid people and their more aggressive Malayan neighbors have made them hunt cover in the highlands and the primeval forests. For business, aside from the very important business of making love, they hardly need writing at all; and surely no bamboo ledgers to record their wealth. But love makes as ardent demands upon them as upon other folk, and their swains fallen victim to Cupid whizz out their bolos, slash down a good-sized bamboo, and go to verse writing with intense gusto. So that a love missive may be strung along the length of a 45-foot pole, and the one end trailing in the forest path as the poet indites a warm postscript on the other. Popular damsons soon have enough finely etched poles to build a hut—to burn such telltale documents would be to light a fire endangering the forest. Specimens of the love letter poles have been acquired by scientists and translated, and the astounding truth discovered that a Mangian in love is an inordinate liar!

Curious Reflection

"Have you seen the Museum ghost?" asked my friend, an Egyptologist, when with him in the Egyptian gallery of the British museum. We had just passed the empty black basalt coffin of a priest of Ptah, but on looking through the glass case that contains a statuette of Isis, he pointed out that the previously empty coffin now held a mysterious figure! My companion's explanation of this somewhat disturbing apparition was that the reflection of an effigy in a coffin on the other side of Isis' case was caught by one glass of the case and thrown by the other glass right into the vacant coffin of Ptah's priest! The illusion is certainly remarkable.—London Mail.

"I Won A $25 Prize For A Loaf of Bread At Our County Farmer's Institute"

Women Now Find It Easy To Bake Prize Bread and Pastry

WOMEN all over the country are now saying: "No longer is there need for worry about baking results. Now you can be sure of success with pies and cakes, bread and biscuits."

They use a new-type flour for all baking purposes—GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour that simplifies baking remarkably and banishes the cause of most baking failures.

Failures, experts found, were mostly due to the fact that 2 sacks of the same flour often acted differently, even with the same recipe. . . it was not uniform in oven action.

So now all GOLD MEDAL Flour is "Kitchen-tested" before it comes to you. As each batch comes through the mill it is tested by actual baking—bread, cakes, biscuits, pastries—in an oven just

Idea of Wedding Cake Credited to Victoria

Gunter's famous confectionery shop in Berkeley square, London, goes back to 1750, when it was known by the sign of the Pot and Pine Apple.

A perusal of the firm's books, dating from 1820, affords many curious insights into the table customs of late Georgian and early Victorian times. Twelfth cakes were ordered by the ton year after year, and the addition of two packs of cards to every such order was the almost invariable rule. Curiously enough, however, wedding cakes would seem to have been unknown at London society weddings until Queen Victoria set the fashion by ordering one on her marriage. So great was the public curiosity concerning this cake that over 21,000 people passed through the Berkeley square premises in order to view it.

Insect-Catching Plants
All plants have interesting characteristics, but few are so endlessly mysterious and fascinating as are the insect-catching and insect-devouring plants, of which Florida has an especially large number, comprising species of butterworts, sundews, pitcher plants, and bladderworts. No less than five species of pitcher plants grow in Florida, says Nature Magazine, and the large flowers are so remarkable in form that a writer in 1672 aptly called them "fantastical flowers." Yet the hollow, trumpet-shaped leaves, dotted and veined with white and red and purple, are even more fantastic than the flowers, and most fantastic of all are the means by which these handsome leaves lure and capture and devour their living prey.

ORLAND PARK

Mrs. Jacob Kramer will serve a Coffee in her home Friday afternoon April 18. All are invited to attend. There will be a program and refreshments.

Rev. P. Sanders will conduct the Tuesday Holy Week services at the Worth Community church Tuesday evening April 15. The subject will be "The Day of Conflict in Christ's Life."

On April 7, ten ladies of the Orland Park P. T. A. attended the Flower Show being held under the auspices of the Central States Garden and Flower association, at the Chicago Stadium. This is a most wonderful display, not only of flowers and shrubbery, but furnishes a world of suggestion and information to the home owner on the tenant of a house that has any garden possibilities. Everyone of the ladies who attended the exposition came away with new ideas and higher ideals on how to beautify the home surroundings. The ladies who made up the party of P. T. A. members attending the show were: Mrs. H. Adele Cooper and her mother, Mrs. Sherman S. Knox, Mrs. Chas. S. Knox, Mrs. Chas. Mullen, Mrs. Earl Reisch, Mrs. H. Heitwig, Mrs. Ray Doctor, Mrs. Ben Hauss and Mrs. Al. Klein.

Attending in a party such as this an accrued benefit was gained by each member thereof. Every individual had perceived some possibility which had perhaps, escaped the notice of the other members of the party and during the communal luncheon or in the ride home, these different ideas or viewpoints were brought out for discussion, to the mutual advantage of every one.

This, added to the holiday spent, attendant upon such an excursion away from the usual hum-drum program of home life and the good fellowship developed by such association, adds much to the individual enjoyment and to civic progress. It is to be hoped that more such parties may be arranged to attend, enjoy and learn from any similar show or exposition which may have as its ideal, the development of the home beautiful idea.

The Sunday Evening Club of the Orland Park M. E. church will present their three act comedy "I'll Explain Everything" at the Marley Community church on the evening of April 22nd.

Spring Is Here

Spring landed with a bound on Thursday when the mercury shot up to 88 degrees, setting a record for April. The blazing bonfires and the air laden with bonfire smoke is a sure sign that old man winter has left us and the Good Old Summer Time is near at hand.
